

“Shared experiences of ROSC members”

An evening of recollections and memories of how members really learnt to Sail

Join us to find out about some of our members sailing background and be inspired to sail more or at least be entertained with photos and anecdotes!

When we talk to experienced sailing friends and acquaintances it's easy to forget there must have been a time before they could sail and that they must have learnt to sail somehow. No one is born a sailor – some start as kids with their parents some later, many start on dinghies, some learn quickly while others take longer or say they have never stopped learning. Whether you are relatively new to sailing or have years of experience, the evening should provide you with an insight of fellow member's trials and tribulations of mastering sailing skills. If you are still learning then you will get pointers for the way forward based on real experiences. If you are a long standing member the evening should entertain you and bring back happy memories (and maybe some painful reminders) of when you were learning to sail. Whatever your experience level you will hopefully enjoy hearing about some of our members sailing backgrounds and have a laugh at some of the anecdotes.

PS: If you would like five minutes of fame to tell a tale or two on the evening then Steve Giggs would be pleased to hear from you!
